Introduction

How to use this guide

This guide is intended to help self-employed people and employers, as well as tax and business advisors, choose a business industry classification (BIC) code and ACC levy classification unit (CU).

At the back of the guide you'll find a comprehensive list of all levy classification units in the levy rates table. This includes information on:

- classification units
- levy risk groups
- employer and self-employed levy rates.

If you have any queries about information contained in this guide you can contact our Business Customer Contact Centre on 0800 222 776.

If you're an accountant or business advisor with a client query, call our Agents' Line on 0800 222 991.

You can also find out more about how levies work and the levy setting process at acc.co.nz/how-levies-work

Levy classifications

We use a variety of classification codes to determine your levies.

What is a business industry classification (BIC) code?

A BIC code is a way of classifying a business or self-employed individual by the main activity they are involved in. 'Activity' means the external service provided or product that's produced or sold by a business or, in the case of self-employed individuals, the nature of the work undertaken.

When you register for GST you're required to choose a single BIC code that describes the activity of the business. The BIC code that most accurately describes the nature of the business or trading activity must be chosen.

If, after reading this guide, you're unable to identify a description that accurately describes the nature of your business, visit www.businessdescription.co.nz to easily search for your correct BIC code and CU or contact our Contact Centre on 0800 222 776.

What is a classification unit (CU)?

Every business and self-employed individual is assigned a classification unit (CU) based on their BIC code.

We group similar businesses and self-employed individuals this way to make sure that levies are fair, and to ensure that the costs of claims are shared fairly among the industries responsible for those costs.

Depending on the cost of injury claims made each year, weighted with the liable earnings within a classification, CUs can move into a different levy risk group, which leads to a higher or lower levy.

A CU represents levy payers with a similar risk of workplace injury. Each CU has a corresponding levy rate, which is used to calculate levies for workplace injury cover. Each CU has its own unique five-digit numerical code. For example, 25510 is the code for Tyre manufacturing.

The CU is also shown on your invoice together with the corresponding levy rate.

If more than one CU is applicable and you are:

- a self-employed individual – the CU with the highest levy rate must be used
- a business – the CU with the highest levy rate must be used, unless you are eligible to be assigned multiple CUs.

Levy risk groups

We use a risk-based classification system whereby business activities are grouped so that the costs of work injuries are fairly distributed among those with similar risk characteristics.

We set levies for each CU by comparing costs of previous and predicted future claims with total earnings within that activity group.

Australian and New Zealand Industrial Classification 2006 (ANZSICo6)

The structure and coverage of the classifications listed in this guide are based on the levy classes contained within ANZSICo6.

These can be viewed by searching either the Statistics New Zealand website at www.stats.govt.nz or the Australian Bureau of Statistics website at www.abs.gov.au.

Choosing your BIC code and description

Why is it important to choose the correct BIC code?

Choosing the correct BIC code means your accounts at Inland Revenue and ACC will be set up with the right information, and any invoices sent will be calculated correctly.

Our CU codes are based on BIC codes, so it's important that you select the right BIC code for your industry.

Step 1 Describe the activity

For businesses, the activity normally refers to the external service provided and/or product that's produced or sold.

Incidental/supporting functions relating to the external activity such as administration, management, marketing and distribution, technical support, maintenance and product development are treated as part of that external activity and not as separate activities.

For a self-employed person, the activity refers to the nature of the work done, rather than the context of the business in which the work takes place.

Step 2 Use the general industry classification category listing

The list on page 10 includes general categories and page references. Find the general category most appropriate for your activity and go to those pages indicated for a more detailed description and the associated BIC code.

Step 3 Find the BIC code

Please select the BIC code by referring to descriptions according to general industry classifications that most accurately describe your activity. The key word index at the back of this guide may assist in locating the relevant page.

If you are unable to find a BIC code/description similar to an activity listed for an ACC classification, select the BIC code that is nearest to your activity. If no similar BIC code is available, any of the BIC codes listed under a particular CU will ensure that you are invoiced under that ACC classification, and at the corresponding levy rate.

For example, if you provide plumbing services, there are seven different BIC codes to choose from under CU 42310 Plumbing services.

Go to www.businessdescription.co.nz to search easily for your correct BIC code and CU.

When selecting your BIC code:

- Avoid using generic terms such as ‘consultant’, ‘estate’, ‘family trust’ and ‘investment’. It’s not relevant to the business description whether the business is conducted through a trust or company or on behalf of an estate
- Be specific about the type of activity undertaken, e.g. ‘pottery manufacturing’, ‘residential property investment’, ‘sheep farming’.

Guidance on specific industries

Manufacturing

- Manufacturing parts or components of an item is included with manufacturing the completed item
- If it’s not listed separately, repairing or maintaining an item is included with the manufacture of that item. Note that there is a repair and maintenance section on pages 126-129
- Assembly is classified as manufacturing for levy purposes

Retailing and wholesaling

- If goods are bought for resale, it establishes that a selling activity exists
- Those retailing through an online store, market stall or telemarketing sales are classified under the BIC Code(s) which most accurately describe the item(s) sold
- In most cases, retailing and wholesaling businesses include the installation of goods in customers’ premises. We’d classify them under the retailing and wholesaling CU, not under a CU for the installation
- For example, an appliance retailer that also installs the goods they sell is classified with CU 52340 Electrical, electronic, and gas appliance retailing rather than an installation CU
- If retailing or wholesaling on a commission basis, there are separate BIC codes for these activities

Sub-contracting

- A manufacturer who sub-contracts the physical production of goods may be classified as a wholesaler – see ANZSICo6 Division F for guidance
- A builder who sub-contracts all the construction and trade services is classified as a property developer
- A sub-contractor who performs a range of trade or business services should list the BIC code which relates to the activity that has the highest CU levy rate, unless there is a relevant multi-service description and BIC code
- There are separate descriptions and corresponding BIC codes for retailers and wholesalers who sub-contract all the physical handling of the goods, and construction services where all physical trade work is sub-contracted.

Business administrative and management services

Employers and self-employed people are only entitled to use the BIC codes relating to the business administration or management service business descriptions where the service provided is:

- a business administration service (that is, contributing to the administration of external customers' businesses)
- a business management service provided to external customers (i.e. a business consultancy, advisory or management support service that does not have its own separate classification).

The BIC codes relating to these business descriptions cannot be used by an employer where they refer to services supplied internally within the employer's organisation.

If there are inconsistencies between this guide and the legislation, the legislation will prevail.

For more information

Go to www.businessdescription.co.nz to search easily for your correct BIC code and CU.

Multiple business activities

You may find there is more than one appropriate description for your business.

If so, you must use the BIC code relating to the description with the highest Work Account levy rate as shown in column 6. If there is more than one description at the highest levy rate, use the BIC code that relates to the part of the business with the largest amount of liable earnings at that rate.

Self-employed

If you're self-employed and involved in two or more business activities, the BIC code with the highest Work Account levy rate must be chosen.

If the CU with the highest Work levy rate makes 5% or less of your total self-employed earnings, we can use the CU with the lower Work levy rate. You need to keep accurate records to show us how you've distributed your earnings.

Employers

If you're an employer, you may find there is more than one appropriate description for your business. If so, you must use the BIC code relating to the description with the highest Work Account levy as shown in column 6. If there is more than one description at the highest levy rate, use the BIC code that relates to the part of your business with the largest amount of liable earnings at that rate.

The following are guidelines for multiple CUs to be assigned:

- The business must have distinct and independent activities:
  - each activity must provide a service to an external customer – an internal service provider is not classified separately
  - any one activity must be able to continue without adaptation if all the other activities ended
  - producing raw materials for, and selling the production from, a manufacturing unit are not separate activities.
- The accounting records must demonstrate the separate management and operation of each activity:
  - regularly produced management accounts are more likely to satisfy this condition than annual accounts
  - accounts created retrospectively do not demonstrate the separate management of the activity during the year
  - accounts must mirror the organisational structure to demonstrate separate management
  - a good practical test is whether the accounting records would establish a value for the activity, if it were sold
  - all income and expense items should be attributed to the activity at source (reallocation on a percentage or share basis is usually unsatisfactory)
  - the accounting records must contain all relevant income and expenses, including overheads – we may ask to view accounting or wage records.
- There must be records showing the earnings of employees separately for each activity:
  - separate activities cannot exist if all staff are shared

- separate payroll systems are not required – the wage records may be kept on a central system
- for employees engaged in two or more activities, the highest rated applicable classification must be used, but ignore any activity that provides 5% or less of an employee's earnings.
  - > If a company is a consolidated group filing an IR4 return, individual PAYE returns must still be filed for each employing company in the group.
  - > Each of those companies must use a classification (or classifications) based solely on its own activity.
  - > The nominated company may not use multiple classifications to describe the activities of the other companies in the consolidated group.

Sharemilkers

If you're a sharemilker operating under a standard sharemilking agreement, we consider you to be self-employed. This applies whether you work on a 50/50, 39%, 29% or any other basis.

Partnerships

Where self-employed earnings come from a partnership, the BIC code selected in the tax return should describe the activity of the self-employed person within the partnership. This may not be the same as the business activity of the partnership.

For example, if one member of a partnership has an administrative role and the other an operations role, each will select a different BIC code describing their own work role.

2. ACC CU description, and list of main activities covered by each CU
3. BIC codes relating to each ACC CU
4. Business industry descriptions relating to each ACC CU (please note that 'mfg' and 'nec' are abbreviations for 'manufacturing' and 'not elsewhere classified' respectively)
5. LRG – the levy risk group in which this CU is placed for pricing and experience rating purposes
6. Employer and ACC CoverPlus self-employed Work Account levy rate (the rate applicable to the 2021/22 employer final account will be found in the 2021/22 Guidebook)
7. ACC CoverPlus Extra (CPX) is an optional product for self-employed people (including Non-PAYE shareholder-employees). CPX covers agreed weekly compensation. In the event of an injury where the claim is accepted the standard rate guarantees agreed weekly compensation without any adjustment if the business continues to generate income or there is a partial return to work
8. ACC CoverPlus Extra – LLWC (Lower Level of Weekly Compensation) offers the option to pay a slightly lower CPX levy in return for reducing levels of weekly compensation being payable in the event of an injury where the claim is accepted if the business continues to generate income or there is a partial return to work
9. The Working Safer (WS) levy collected on behalf of WorkSafe to support its activities.

Note: All levy rates are shown exclusive of GST.
